

AWARENESS IS POWER®

Insights for Business

May 2009

Volume 9 Issue 38

BAYLEY & BENDER, INC
SUCCESS THROUGH INSIGHT!

Improve Morale – Give Employees Time Off!

Given the current state of the economy, giving your employees time off is probably the furthest thing from your mind. However, not giving enough attention to this subject could come back to bite you later . . . and it might do so sooner than you think!

The reason is simple. There's a good chance that the employees you currently have are anxious and apprehensive at the moment. With layoff figures and unemployment numbers in the headlines just about every week, it's only natural that they carry some trepidation with them to their job. The problem is that you need them at the top of their game in order to put their talent and skills to the best possible use.

This is why you should ensure your employees take time off, especially their vacation time. If they are well rested and refreshed, then you'll reap the benefits upon their return:

- Company culture – A more relaxed atmosphere contributes to a better culture within the company.

Continued on page two – Improve Morale

How Are You Improving Morale?

Implementing a Health & Productivity Management Program

In the first two articles we looked at the basics of a Health & Productivity Management (H&PM) program, as well as the advantages associated with using one. In this, the third and final article in the series, we're going to explore how a company can implement such a program. The way in which we'll approach this analysis is from the standpoint of size. In other words, how both larger companies and smaller companies should implement their programs for the purpose of maximizing their efforts.

Blueprint for larger companies

Bigger companies with thousands of employees face more challenges than smaller companies, in large part because of their size. As you recall, the effectiveness of Health & Productivity Management is tied directly to its emphasis on integration throughout the system. The bigger a company is, the less integration there is, for a couple of reasons.

First, employees are more likely to be scattered throughout the country (or around the world) at various locations. Second, the different departments within a larger company tend to work more independently of each other than they do in a smaller company. As a result, the company is less efficient—and subsequently, less effective—in the area of employee health and productivity.

The keys for the implementation of any program are consistent and explicit communication and set expectations, and this is especially true in the case of large companies.

Continued on page two – Health & Productivity

Inside This Issue

1. Improve Morale – Give Employees Time Off
2. Implementing a Health & Productivity Management Program
3. One Minute Ideas
4. Developing Confidence

All articles, quotes, and material in this newsletter are copyrighted. © 2009. No part can be reproduced in any form without specific written consent from copyright holder(s). All rights reserved worldwide.

Continued from page one – Improve Morale

Employees, like everybody else, are intrinsically drawn to people and/or things that help them to reduce the stress in their lives. Your company could be one of those things.

- Productivity – Employees are more productive when they're rested and relaxed, not when they're frazzled and feel worn out.
- Loyalty – A relaxed atmosphere, a better company culture, more productivity...it all leads to more loyalty within the ranks.
- Retention – This is the ultimate payoff. One day, the economy is going to turn around and some employees might be tempted to sample what they believe might be greener pastures. However, they'll remember your investment in their peace of mind and resist temptation.

During tough economic times, improving morale is often difficult to accomplish. However, by focusing your efforts on helping your employees take the time off they need, you'll not only improve morale, you'll also improve productivity.

That's a combination that's tough to beat!

If you have any questions about this article, or if you'd like to know how we can help you with your current hiring needs, contact us at: Bayley & Bender 301-439-8317 or E-mail: aip@awarenessispower.com

Copyright protected, all rights reserved worldwide. ©2009 Gary Sorrell

Accept challenges, so that you may feel the exhilaration of victory.
~ George S. Patton

Be on the Lookout for Coaching Moments

Coaching isn't appropriate for every situation. Sometimes, staffers want to work on their own, uninterrupted by the boss.

To spot employees ready for coaching, pay attention to when things aren't going well or when they could use an extra hand on a tough project. That's when they'll be eager to work with you.

Continued from page one – Health & Productivity

With that in mind, below are important steps that must be undertaken if an H&PM program is to succeed.

1. Secure specific details from senior members of management regarding what they expect the program to achieve. The more detailed, the better.
2. Identify a team of 10 or more people—including a leader—to create and then carry out the program's overall vision and individual objectives. This might include the use of an outside consultant.
3. Determine which members of the group will be responsible for which tasks. Make sure those roles and tasks are properly communicated.
4. Decide when and where integration and interventions will be utilized. (Refer to the first article in this series for more information about these aspects of the program.)
5. Devise a preliminary draft of the program's plan, including the evaluation process, for whatever span of time has been approved for the initiative. Three to five years is the norm.
6. Use feedback from senior members of management and stakeholders to modify the plan and present it for final approval.
7. Begin implementation of the H&PM program, making adjustments when necessary.

Blueprint for small to medium-sized companies

As you might imagine, the blueprint for smaller companies is, well, smaller than it is for larger companies.

However, the core directives and procedures remain basically the same, especially in regards to consistent communication and set expectations. These are crucial to ensuring success with any Health & Productivity Management program.

Rather than list how the blueprint for small and medium-sized companies is the same as for larger ones, it will be easier to list how they are different:

1. The plan is shorter and simpler in scope and ambition.

Continued on page three – Health & Productivity

Continued from page two – Health & Productivity

2. The group of people comprising the implementation team is smaller, as well, perhaps consisting of four to six people as opposed to 10 or more for larger companies.
3. The span of time approved for the initiative is usually shorter, no more than three years in most cases.
4. If the company is too small to conduct proper integration and interventions, these tasks are outsourced to a separate vendor.

Attention to detail

For a Health & Productivity Management program to be successful, its implementation cannot be haphazard or neglected in any way. In addition to consistent communication and set expectations throughout the process, attention to detail is also of paramount importance, especially during the evaluation phase. Remember, an H&PM program is not unlike any other business initiative – it's designed to save the company both time and money and help it become more productive and profitable. If it's not accomplishing these goals, then it's ultimately not effective.

Something else to remember is that an H&PM program is a little like a fingerprint. No two programs are exactly alike. What works for one company might not work for another. However, if done correctly, the creation and implementation of such a program can hold the key to combating the challenges presented by current economic conditions and the state of healthcare in the years to come.

Copyright protected, all rights reserved worldwide. ©2009 Gary Sorrell

Individually, we are one drop. Together, we are an ocean.
~ Ryunosuke Satoro

On The Lighter Side

The Boss Moral

A Sales rep, an Administration clerk and their Manager are walking to lunch when they find an antique oil lamp. They rub it and a Genie comes out in a puff of smoke. The Genie says, "I usually only grant three wishes, so I'll give each of you just one."

"Me first! Me first!" says the admin clerk. "I want to be in the Bahamas, driving a speedboat, with out a care in the world." Poof! She's gone.

In astonishment, "Me next! Me next!" says the sales rep. "I want to be in Hawaii, relaxing on the beach with my personal masseuse, an endless supply of pina coladas and the love of my life." Poof! He's gone.

"OK, you're up," the Genie says to the manager. The manager says, "I want those two back in the office after lunch."

Moral of the story: Always let your boss have the first say.

ONE MINUTE IDEAS

Leadership Lessons from the Ant

Do you want to make a difference? Then pay attention to the metaphor of the ant. It's amazing that one of the smallest of God's creatures can become one of His greatest teachers. The lessons the ant teaches us can be summarized this way:

A – Attitude of Initiative

Ants don't need a commander to tell them to get started.

N – Nature of Integrity

Ants work faithfully and need no outside accountability to keep them doing right.

T – Thirst for Industry

Ants work hard and will replace their anthill when it gets ruined.

S – Source of Insight

Ants store provisions in the summer.

If we consider and learn from the ways of the ant, we can grow wise.

Don't miss next month's issue.
Subscribe now!

AWARENESS IS POWER®
Insights for Business

2024 Powder Mill Rd
Silver Spring, MD 20903
Tel: 301-439-8317

E-mail:

aip@awarenesspower.com

Visit Our Web Site at:

www.awarenesspower.com

12 Issues For Only $97

Developing Confidence

Confidence is a critical ingredient to your growth and development. You develop self-confidence by creating success. Through your goals you can provide for frequent successes. Set short term goals in the beginning.

Experience often the satisfaction of moving a 'Short Term Goal' to the 'Goal Accomplished' area of your daily planner or other tracking device. People who have well-defined goals in life develop confidence through achieving those goals. Thus, they are always better prepared to confront new situations, and achieve higher goals. As you achieve goals, and feel the satisfaction of achievement, your confidence in your abilities is enhanced as is your potential to achieve more and higher goals.

Lack of confidence also stems from our inability to visualize successfully doing whatever it is we want to do. Careful planning, specific action steps, and affirmations help you clearly plan exactly how and why you can achieve your goals. It focuses your imagination on the positive rather than the negative.

Confidence is the key ingredient to any plan. It is part of the solution to every obstacle you have identified in your goal. Fortunately, confidence is a limitless resource; the more you use of it, the more there is to use. However, there is a price to be paid. To 'use' confidence requires involvement: only through involvement (and consequent testing and confrontation) are boundaries pushed back and fears overcome. To take goal setting seriously guarantees that you will need to increase your confidence. To take goal setting seriously also guarantees that you will increase your confidence.

Reference source: Resource Associates Corporation, Supervisory Development Program. Copyright protected worldwide. Adapted by Sorrell Associates, LLC

LEADERSHIP SEMINARS

Located at Serenity in St. Michaels, Maryland

AIP002	Dynamic Leadership Professional & Personal Excellence	Serenity	5 -7 May 09	3
---------------	--	----------	-------------	---

Cruise and Learn! The fun begins the first day of the seminar. At 5 PM on May 5th break away from the pack and join us on a 48 foot Sea Ray Yacht sunset cruise sponsored by Clarks Landing Boat Sales. Register today. Seating is limited.

We also provide in-house seminars - Call us if you are interested in an in-house seminar!

Pillars of Success. Don't miss this book! It's a Great Gift for your team, family, friends, or co-workers. Call Janine to order - 301-439-8317 or click on the image for more information!

PILLARS OF SUCCESS

It's no secret that success is something everyone wants. The process can be a mystery and Pillars Of Success is a book all about revealing success secrets of several of the most prosperous people in business today.

Contributing author Pat Bender has an Awareness Is Power® process. "The more aware you are," she says, "the more aware you'll become."

You will learn what Pat says are three important things leaders and successful people have in common.

CLICK ON THE IMAGE FOR MORE DETAILS AND TO GET YOUR COPY TODAY!!

Bayley & Bender 301-439-8317 or E-mail: aip@awarenessispower.com
2024 Powder Mill Rd, Silver Spring, MD 20903
Visit Our Web Site at: www.awarenessispower.com